To Whom It May Concern:

I have known Todd Grant professionally for the last five years. I have seen him in and out of court and have observed his work. I have also hired him to assist in preparing work for some of my cases.

His work is of high quality. He is an excellent researcher and writer. He has the ability to spot critical issues and to frame them cogently so that judges immediately can see the important points in order to make a decision.

He relates well to many different kinds of people, particularly in his specialty of family and divorce law. As to his interactions, he is forceful but professional and not given to hostility.

He is clearly a person of integrity. He values both a strong professional as well as a strong family life.

I would be happy to discuss him further with any recipient of this letter.

Sincerely,

Jean Ledwith King
